

A select list of websites relevant to time management at university

Kim Shahabudin, University of Reading

There are a large number of websites providing time management advice and strategies. Many offer advice for managing time at work, or focus on work-life balance. Most universities offer some advice on time management, usually provided by learning development units, counselling or careers. This page lists selected sites that provide something different, or can be used for training on particular aspects of time management, or with specific student groups.
